DETAILED ACTION

Priority

1. Acknowledgment is made of applicant's claim for foreign priority based on an application filed in Japan on September 28, 2000. It is noted, however, that applicant has not filed a certified copy of the 2000-300564 application as required by 35 U.S.C. 119(b). Please submit a certified copy of the 2000-300564 application as required by 35 U.S.C. 119(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Lowery et al. (US005894554A).

4. With regard to claims 1-4 and 11, Lowery discloses,

- preparing user interface information including:
  - server definition information defining the plurality of servers providing user interfaces constituting an integrated user interface provided to the client;
and (Lowery, col.2, lines 15-34; col.5, lines 39-47; col.6, lines 32-48)

Lowery teaches of “[providing] a Web page designer with HTML extensions, or ‘dyna’ tags. These dyna tags provide customized HTML functionality to a Web page designer, to allow the designer to build customized HTML templates that specify the source and placement of retrieved data” (Lowery, col.6, lines 32-37). In other words, Lowery teaches of providing extension tags to build templates specifying the retrieval source and data as well as specifying the placement of the retrieved data.

- copy data information for assigning a function for copying common data between user interfaces constituting the integrated user interface;

(Lowery, col.2, lines 15-34; col.5, lines 39-47; col.6, lines 32-48)

Lowery teaches of using the HTML extension tags to “[specify] a data source and a column name to allow the HTML template to identify the data source to log into and the column name from which to retrieve data” (Lowery, col.6, lines 38-41).

- upon a request from the client, requesting for the user interface to each of the servers providing the user interfaces constituting the integrated interface, according to the integrated user interface information; (Lowery, col.3, line 64 – col.4, line 1; col.5, lines 37-47)

Lowery teaches of the “server [receiving] the dispatched request, it processes the request and retrieves the data from an appropriate data source ... [which] include databases, spreadsheets, files and any other type of data repository” (Lowery, col.5, lines 39-44). Lowery also states that the “page server can retrieve data from more than one data source and incorporate the data from these multiple data sources in a single Web page” (Lowery, col.5, lines 45-47).

- assigning the copy function to each of the user interfaces transferred from the respective servers, according to the integrated user interface information, thereby creating an integrated user interface integrating the user interfaces having the copy function; and (Lowery, col.4, lines 25-31; col.6, lines 20-48)

Lowery teaches of using the “customized HTML templates that specify the source and placement of retrieved data” (Lowery, col.6, lines 35-37) and retrieving the specified data from the appropriate data source to create dynamic Web pages for transmitting back and displaying to the requesting client.

- transmitting the integrated user interface to the client so as to display the integrated user interface to the client. (Lowery, col.4, lines 25-31; col.6, lines 20-48)

Lowery teaches of using the “customized HTML templates that specify the source and placement of retrieved data” (Lowery, col.6, lines 35-37) and retrieving the specified data from the appropriate data source to create dynamic Web pages for transmitting back and displaying to the requesting client.

5. With regard to claims 5-6, Lowery discloses,

- wherein the client is a WWW browser; the plurality of servers are WWW application servers; user interfaces provided by the respective servers are pages provided by the WWW application servers; and the integrated user interface is an integrated page which integrates the aforementioned pages. (Lowery, col.2, lines

15-34; col.3, line 64 – col.4, line 1; col.4, lines 25-31; col.5, lines 37-47; col.6, lines 20-48)

- wherein the processing apparatus, the WWW browser, and the servers are connected to one another via LAN (local area network) in an enterprise (Lowery, col.2, lines 15-34; col.3, line 64 – col.4, line 1; col.4, lines 25-31; col.5, lines 37-58; col.6, lines 20-48)

6. With regard to claims 7-10, Lowery discloses,

- wherein the copy data information includes an "OUT" type indicating a common data of a user interface as a copy source and an "IN" type indicating a common data of a user interface as a copy destination. (Lowery, col.2, lines 15-34; col.5, lines 39-47; col.6, lines 32-48)

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure:

- Lowery et al. (US006415335B1) relates to the field of Internet technology. Specifically, the present invention relates to the creation and management of custom World Wide Web sites.
- Donohue et al. (US005987480A) delivering documents having dynamic content embedded over the worldwide Internet or a local internet or intranet. The server computer can receive requests from client computers connected to the Internet, the requests identifying desired documents to be delivered. In response to such a request, the server computer selects one of the document templates corresponding to the desired document, populates the document template with content stored in the data source based on respective values of content corresponding to names in the dynamic tags and flow directives, and delivers the populated document to the client computer.

- Sugiarto et al. (US006278449B1) relates generally to computer networks, and more particularly to the customizing of information for retrieval over a computer network.
